There are many different kinds of drywall tools that you may need to know about. You could either purchase the standard tool set or go for individual tools such as angle rollers, automatic taping tools, drywall stilts, standard pumps, sanding heads, etc. The common taping tool set would have tools such as 3 inch easy roll angle head, automatic tapers, box fillers, wrap around flat box handles or 8 inch angle applicators etc.

There are many categories of drywalling tools as well. There are varieties of angle heads such as head handles, angle boxes and flat boxes. You can choose between 2 inch, 3 inch and 3.5 inch angle heads along with flat box varieties from 7 inch to 12 inches. There are continuous flow drywall tools which can help in changing the way drywalling techniques and finishing is done presently. For example, the modern pumps ensure a continuous stream of the joint compound flows into the automatic taper. This greatly enhances efficiency of tools like corner finish sets, flat boxes and tapers while also enhancing work safety to a great extent. Special taping tool sets include items such as nail spotters, goosenecks, corner flushers, corner rollers and compound applicators.

These sets help you enhance the efficiency to a great extent. You can choose between powerful tool sets and standard tool sets. Precision instruments like angle heads can also make things easier. Examples of such tools also include corner finishers. You would need the indispensable flat boxes to dispense mud for excellent finish while the handle ensuring that the box is actually held comfortably and in a perfect position. The taping and finishing tools not only enhance the speed of the activity to a great extent but also offer excellent flexibility. High capacities of modern pumps and the use of tool-less filler make things much easier as well.
