How many people in this world can predict the way nature moves? How many people in this world can prevent or escape the fury of the nature, despite of the fact that there are tremendous amount of scientific achievements that are being utilized to follow or understand the course of nature. The answer would be a dull No. But these are the people who are interested or maybe are in love with the vagaries of nature. But then there is another breed of people who are not at all concerned, or to be more precise are lest familiar with the true meaning and essence of nature. These are the people who are more interested in making money and that too in as much amount as possible. These are the people who are absolutely indifferent to the fact that there is something called nature which in its fury can take away everything that they have earned. One person after suffering some heavy losses while following the same path as the above mentioned wealth chasing breed realized the unbreakable bond between nature and everything that man, who himself is a creation of nature, indulges himself in. He is Roger Hamilton.

Roger Hamilton realizes that if there is a single minded pursuit of wealth by an individual, or an organization without taking into account that form of nature embedded deep within the human then the entire exercise might fructify into building of castles of gold but with a great risk what with the whims and fancies of nature. Thus he tried his best to understand the true and the pristine relation between the act of wealth creation and the forces of nature. And after lots of research and a lot of hard work and some deep analysis he came to the conclusion that each human being no matter in which domain he is operating in carries within him a natural flow which over the years of chasing wealth had been buried deep within and which needs to be unearthed if the real meaning of wealth creation is to be understood.

Roger Hamilton after completely understanding this unflinching relation between man and his innate natural flow came out with his set of theories that included some of the best ever personality tests to help the individual realize his natural flow. And once that natural flow has been brought to the fore, the only thing that would happen to the individual is the unfurling of a relationship between the authentic man and his personalized desire to create wealth without any fear of loosing it. And that wealth would continue to flow without requiring any hard work.
