E-commerce stores are one of the most effective ways of door to door selling, in a recent survey it has been analysed that the success rate of online stores have shown terrible improvement as compared to the real brick stores, This is what Internet Marketing Consultant does. However the issue remains what does one need to set-up an online store, so, here is the solution one needs an online product or services catalogue or brochure, e-commerce software, framework or platform, payment modes and gateways and lastly shipping and feedback services. Feedback services are generally not considered by many but it has become a necessity for long run and sustainment of the online business. Initially it might not be possible by small firms to establish a valuable feedback system but with time and increasing market capture via the product the demand of a reliable feedback system becomes prominent.

The payment gateway is another very vital and significant part of establishing an online store, be it for product or services. The need of an efficient gateway is the most important aspect, because it is through this gateway that the transfer of currency from either of the parties may occur. It is important to chose a secure as well as hustle free payment mode or options, so that the payer or the payee may not get occupied and give a second thought to use the same site for the next time.
