A booming economy and rising disposable incomes have contributed to the evolution of online shopping stores. In what is clearly being seen as a boost to the online retail sector, a recent survey by ASSOCHAM has revealed that about 40 per cent among those surveyed across cities like the aforesaid cities like Delhi, Mumbai, Chennai, Bangalore, Kolkata, Ahmadabad, Chandigarh, Ludhiana, Lucknow and Jaipur said they prefer to shop online. In fact this inclination among the youth is going to help the online retail industry to reach Rs 7,000 crore marks by 2015, ASSOCHAM predicts. Among the reasons cited by the youth, ones like convenience to shop anytime during the 24 hours and ability to collect detailed product information have helped fuel the trend.

Besides the convenience of researching a variety of products available and comparing prices from different vendors anywhere in the world, are also a factor. Interestingly, a majority of consumers also said they shop online to purchase products that cannot be found in malls and the local markets.
