Dropping the Hint About Jewelry Boxes by Edan K Alvo

Article published on February 8th 2012 | Shopping

Are jewelry boxes at the top of your Christmas list this year? If you want to make sure you get what you are hoping for, there are subtle ways of dropping hints about it to let somebody know that jewelry boxes are on your mind. These are methods that are just enough to plant the idea of jewelry boxes as a gift for you in somebodyâ€™s head without going overboard. However, these techniques also take into account that some people may be slow on the uptake unless they receive clear, distinct messages.

Trying to Keep Your Jewelry Somewhere Else: Jewelry boxes are really the best place to keep jewelry, but if you donâ€™t have one and would like one, try keeping your jewelry in odd or inconvenient places. Either your sock drawer or that of your spouse is a good place. Be sure, however, to use pieces that you can easily find or donâ€™t mind losing. Keep some in the pantry too, so that when heâ€™s getting the bread out some dangly earrings fall on his head. When he starts asking why on earth you are keeping your jewelry in such places, remark casually that you arenâ€™t as lucky as some women, who have jewelry boxes in which to keep their jewelry. Maybe one day, youâ€™ll be more fortunate.

Make Your Own: Make your own box out of household materials such as cardboard, plywood, gingerbread or PVC piping, using beautiful, wooden and hand-crafted jewelry boxes as your model but making sure to make yours noticeably inferior. They wonâ€™t be the best place to keep your jewelry and your spouse will probably say so. You can just tell him that maybe some jewelry boxes are nicer than yours, but you donâ€™t really have any choice unless some kind soul takes pity on you and gets you a decent replacement.

Talk About Your Friendsâ€™ Jewelry Boxes: Talk about how jealous you are of some of your friends because they have such gorgeous jewelry boxes, while you go without. Mention how you can only dream about having a jewelry box as wonderful as those of Jeanine, or Madeline, or Theresa. If only you could jump on the jewelry boxes boat and have one to compare with them.

Artwork: Set up an easel and canvas and begin to wistfully and longingly paint detailed pictures of jewelry boxes. You can then sigh theatrically and say that if only you had a real jewelry box you wouldnâ€™t be forced to paint pictures of them. Paint several and hang them in every room of the house so that jewelry boxes are what both you look at all day long. Itâ€™ll be hard for both of you to shake the image.

The Casually Open Webpage: If youâ€™ve been browsing the internet for a while, be sure, when youâ€™ finished to leave the browser open and sitting on a jewelry boxes-oriented website. Itâ€™s the twenty-first century equivalent to casually leaving a catalog lying around, open to the page displaying what you want. Actually, this might be easiest (and safest) thing to do.
