Your babyâ€™s education starts from the minute that it is born and each day thereafter unfolds with joy and wonder. From 3 months old , your babyâ€™s road towards developing good language skills begins and you will also start to see amazing inroads in terms of sight, hearing and in deciphering sounds. At this stage, the introduction of educational toys into your babyâ€™s playtime can help to encourage the development of motor skills and his or her sense of awareness. Activity toys, water play toys, and toys with friendly faces and striking colors are an ideal way of furthering this.

Your child is in perpetual motion when it is 6 to 9 months old and during this time toys that stimulate movement and activity are ideal for them. Push the toys away from your baby to encourage them to crawl and stand, which as well as being good exercise for your child, also helps to develop your babyâ€™s hand and eye coordination. Perfect toys for this would be a roller rattle, puzzle ball, rolling shapes or baby vehicles. Stacking toys are fantastic for this age group as they help to develop a sense of cause and effect and a better understanding of gripping and release creating great educational benefit as well as play value.

When your baby is about 9 to 12 months old, he or she is in an exploration stage. Use bath toys to help them learn about the properties of water and concepts like warm and cool and empty and full. Imagination and shape sorting toys help to improve manual dexterity skills while their stacking toys will take on a whole new meaning as they improve with each try. These lessons set your child on the right path in their later life.

The first birthday is a milestone of learning and your child is now ready to absorb more mature information at a faster rate than ever before. Use toys that encourage role play, stacking and building toys, musical toys, sorting toys and push and pull toys so that they can hone the skills they already posses and develop even further. These types of toys also help your baby boost their cognitive skills, gain self confidence, and ultimately grow with every passing day. Introduce your baby to educational toys and see the transformation in your babyâ€™s life at every stage!
