Essential veterinary supplies: the grooming table by Mary Porter

Article published on June 21st 2012 | Shopping

The humble grooming table is something that has served veterinary practices and enthusiastic dog owners alike very well for generations. Along with the likes of a dog run or scissors it is an absolute essential for anywhere where canine procedures are conducted. With that in mind here is an introduction to the grooming table and some related pieces of equipment:

When it comes to canine care accessories few come more important than the grooming table. This essential piece of kit is used on a day to day basis in many places to facilitate the grooming of a dog. This can be for cosmetic appearance or for practical reasons. For instance in the case of the latter it is common practice to shave animals on the relevant areas of their body before they undergo surgical procedures. Therefore the importance of the grooming table is something that simply cannot be underestimated.

A grooming table is similar to a normal table but has a number of features incorporated into its design. Wheels are a common design feature which adds an extra bit of functionality to a table unit by allowing them to be rolled around. An adjustable grooming arm and noose is also used on occasion to keep animals secured in position for the grooming to take place. Aside from the fundamental features the design of most types of grooming table is essentially the same.
