The mobile phone is an extremely functional piece of modern technology and gone are the days when mobile phones were deemed as an item of luxury. Nowadays most of us can be spotted with a mobile phone in our hands. In fact many people carry more than one cell phone at a time. It is a piece of device that works well not only for making or receiving calls but beyond that. It has much more to do with the concept of staying in touch with friends, family, acquaintances or colleagues.

There is much to be said when it comes to the importance of mobile phones in the present day society. With the advent of the advancement in wireless technology, tremendous competition in the market, an improvement in the buying capacity of people from various walks of life and the high quality of service provided by the service providers, the use of mobile phones have been strongly encouraged and greatly risen.

Besides, it has gone to a level where its importance cannot be measured. We have become heavily dependent on it and cannot imagine life without this extended matchbox. Not many would disagree that a mobile phone can actually act as a savior in times of accidents, emergencies and crisis or situations where tracing and tracking the location of the individual is necessary. In sum, mobile phone is a must have for people from all walks of life.

Although its uses vary from individual to individual, the use of cell phones has boosted coordination and cooperation in our personal as well as professional lines. And that is not all. It veils you with a sense of availability, too. It has integrated our scattered lives and become a part of our basic necessity.

Mobile phone prices in India

The use of mobile phones is also marked by the drastic reduction of the price of cell phones. The fact that they were very costly at the time of their entry into the market, made it unreachable for many people and it was an affair associated by the rich only. But the scenario of the recent past shows that the mobile phone prices in India have undergone a sea change and contemporary times bear testimony to that reality. Now even the rich but also budget â€“savvy people can afford it which is actually a very positive thing. The best part about mobile phone is that its privileges can benefit all and be enjoyed by the heterogeneous society.
