Gamo Big Cat 1200 Review by Jacky Lake

Pellet Shooting is becoming more and more popular amongst Americans nowadays. It is incredibly fun to set up a few targets in the back yard anytime during the year and taking a few shots. One of the upsides of Pellet Shooting is that it is an incredibly cheap hobby, although of course like most things you have to be a little wary of the cheaper equipment on the market. The Gamo Big Cat falls on the cheaper spectrum, but trust me, this thing has all the right â€˜movesâ€™ and is sure not to disappoint even the most experienced shooter out there.

One of the things I like the most about this gun is just how accurate it was. Over a distance of around 25 yards I was able to be as accurate as other guns in my range that I purchased for a much larger price. Therefore I certainly do recommend this as a cheaper alternative to your other models, or it is a fantastic starter pellet gun which will last you for many years to come. It does take a bit of setting up to get it to how you want it, particularly if you have poor eyesight. In the long run it is more than worth the set up time though, you donâ€™t have to do it very often. The scope is 4x32, this is replaceable however if you want something a bit more substantial. What is included is good for the weapon though.

The downside is, this is a particularly heavy gun so it isnâ€™t suitable for smaller people who intend to carry it around for long periods of time. It is manageable though, many of the people that I have spoken to have used this weapon for hunting and camping trips, this shows that it isnâ€™t really out of the range of most people to carry, and in the long run the weight shouldnâ€™t really be a problem.

This is a very fast shooter and packs a lot of punch for the price. It has a stunning 1200 FPS and match-grade accuracy with PBA Ammunition. This gun has been reported to take out small animals from up to 45 yards out. You should be able to hit most things first time from this distance, this make it an ideal weapon for controlling pests that have wandered onto your property.

Yes, this is a basic pellet gun. You donâ€™t get a whole host of features, but what is there certainly does help make this one of the best weapons at this price range. It is accurate, takes a wide range of pellets but above all it is actually fun to fire. It makes an ideal starter pellet gun for people looking to get out there. The best thing is, you donâ€™t really need to put a lot of money down so if you donâ€™t l the hobby then you are not too much out of pocket. I really do suggest buying the Gamo Big Cat 1200 today, whether you are an amateur or an experienced shooter, you certainly will not be disappointed with it.
