How to Start Couponing by Evan Nasseri

Article published on January 12th 2012 | Shopping

In the last few years couponâ€™s have become one of the easiest money saving options available to consumers on the American market. We all know that coupons have been around for ages but in the last few years, with our terrible economy coupons have become a mainstream and successful way of saving money. This can mostly be attributed to mainstream media, with shows such as TLCâ€™s extreme couponing people have seen, that when used properly coupons are the best way to save money on almost anything you need. Now with companies using the internet and online tools like facebook and social groups. The online couponing world is slowly becoming the most powerful couponing resource. With daily pass code deals and ways to print thousands of coupons the internet has catapulted this lost art back into our lives.

When beginning your coupon career it is best to start small. The main problem with beginners is they think that they can conquer the grocery store and become overwhelmed with the amount of organization and patience it takes to go after the â€œBig Fishâ€•. I will show you and easy way to start by searching for something small, in this case energizer coupons, when you go online and type energizer coupons you will get hundreds of sites. The first step a coupon beginner must take is to weed out what coupons you want. If you are shopping online you are looking for sites that are advertising deals for that day, such as 50 percent off purchase of energizer batteries at Amazon. These type of coupons are easy to find and websites are constantly updating their online deals. Now if you are looking for deals to take to the store you need to look for printable coupons, these type of coupons can be printed and to be used for various grocery chains. Remember to always check what stores these coupons can be used at. A lot of grocery chains will only accept certain coupons. The third way to coupons is to go right to the brand source. Companies will advertise on their websites for certain deals which can be used at any store that sells their product.

So, using these simple tactics I found 5 or 6 great energizer coupons that will basically give me over 75 percent savings when I go to the store to purchase them. This took me just over an hours to get all the info and find the best coupons. I hope that this will help you if you are beginning you couponing career. Most people may think that couponing is a waste of time or useless, but once you make it a habit using coupons, you will be amazed at how quickly your little savings add up in your account.
