Koozies - from Design to Shipment by Cicillia Sandrew

Article published on March 12th 2012 | Shopping

Koozies are available for purchase from many online sources. The best online manufacturers will provide each customer with a streamlined approach to designing, purchasing, and receiving the final products in the mail. Options for customization include color selection for the background and imprint, unique artwork, and the amount of space the design will encompass. All these features are integral to creating custom koozies that meet the requirements of each customer.

The first step in creating personalized koozies for an event is to match the design to the theme of the event. This all depends on what sort of gathering it is. Formal occasions such as weddings require in-depth consideration of nearly every component of design. The koozies' color, message, and artwork are dependent on the bride's opinion and the groom's input. Their decisions will most likely extend from a comparison with the wedding's design. Most couples want every element of the wedding to abide by a master blueprint. The wedding koozies should be customized so that the visual design reflects the aesthetics of the ceremony and personalized so that the imprint will feature a special dedication that memorializes the day.

The event planners should then consider their design's fit on can koozies and bottle koozies. They will need to determine whether drinks will be provided in bottles or cans, or both. If the couple is more inclined towards bottles, the design will need to be adapted for a space that is greater lengthwise but more limited in width. Can koozies provide a more uniform surface on which the design can be printed in full. Offering both can and bottle refreshments will allow for more variety from which guests can select their preferred koozies.

Once the specifics of visual design have been established, the next step is to finalize the transaction. Websites should provide a preview of the koozies to ensure the customer's satisfaction. This is especially convenient for a couple planning a wedding. They can assess the design on their selected koozies to decide whether they meet their standards. If they are satisfied with the text imprint but unsure of the artwork, the bride and groom can change the art selection as needed by either uploading their own design or selecting from a list of clipart provided by the company. Once the koozies' design has been finalized, the next step is to input payment information, receive an estimate of production time, and wait for the shipment and wedding day to arrive.
