Custom engagement rings allow couples to celebrate their love and enjoy one-of-a-kind custom ring designs that reflect their personalities. Whether you want a dainty engagement ring with subtle accents, a custom ring with unusual gemstones, or a bold custom engagement ring, Toronto's Studio 1098 Custom Jewellry store creates custom rings that are as unique as you are.

When considering ordering diamond engagement rings made to order, it's important to partner with a designer with extensive ring design knowledge, skills, and passion. In Toronto, jewelers Tamara Kronis and Kathryn Dieroff of Studio 1098 help couples design the most stunning custom diamond rings on the market.

When meeting with your custom engagement ring designer, be prepared to discuss:

The general direction of the custom ring design. For example, what inspires you? Are you inspired by fairy tales and princesses? Does the Celtic culture appeal to you? Has a celebrity wedding given you ideas for your own custom rings? Feel free to bring sketches of your ideas or photos of engagement rings that impress you.

Desired materials. This includes both the precious metals and gemstones desired. Custom engagement rings can be made out of any number of materials including gold, white gold, yellow gold, rose gold, platinum, and palladium. While many couples opt for custom diamond engagement rings, Toronto jewelers can incorporate a variety of gemstones into your design including sapphires, rubies, emeralds, and others. Remember, custom rings are about you and your personal tastes.

The design process. While you'll provide your designer with your vision and the general direction of the design, the design process is organic. It evolves as you and your custom engagement ring designer brainstorm ideas. Your designer is an expert at designing gorgeous rings, so allow her to take your ideas to the next level. This doesn't mean you must approve a design that isn't true to your initial vision, but you may be surprised at how your ideas can evolve into a masterpiece. As ideas evolve, expect to see drawings of the design for final approval.

Your budget. When it comes to designing a custom engagement ring, your budget may play a part in the materials used or the amount of detail that can be provided. If money is no object, your budget is less important to the process. However, for most people, cost is a concern that should be discussed. For example, your designer may suggest substituting palladium for platinum or a using less expensive gemstone with similar properties to the one you're requesting. Your custom ring designer's expertise could lead to a custom engagement ring that looks amazing but at a lower price point than initially expected.

You've waited a lifetime to find the perfect partner. Don't you deserve custom engagement rings?
