With the rise of corporate working habits in India, corporate houses in cities like Mumbai are pushing forward more rigidity towards presentation and appearance. The clothes and polish of a corporate executive’s appearance have become a mark of success and a key to an office’s credibility. This is why equipment like hand dryers in the rest room and a shoe shining machine have become rather important to maintain class and prestige of a business facility. Shoe shining machines may seem to rather mundane – there are shoe shine boys all over the city. However, in the rush of the corporate gauntlet, do people have the time to stand and watch the paint dry while having their shoes polished?

A cobbler or shoe shine boy as commonly seen in the office hubs of cities like Mumbai takes at least 15 minutes of work to get your shoes gleaming and clean. Besides, a shine is always fragile, a simple missed step, or someone making a wrong footing can easily give you an ugly blotch, it’s happened to us all. We just spent time for that perfect polish, and the person next to you in the elevator steps on it by accident! If there is a shoe shine machine near the rest room or the coffee corner at your office premises though, such problems are easily solved.

Shoe shining machines take a jiffy to polish your shoes to a gleam. Wax on, wax off â€“ just like that. The few minutes you take to dry your hands after washing, drink a cup of coffee, or catch a smoke between work can easily get you a good shine job. Even the shopping malls and homes could do with such innovative devices. A quick polish before you leave for work or before you meet your date shouldnâ€™t mean 15 minutes of idle waiting!

A few years ago, people hadn’t heard of such machines even though they were around. It wasn’t popular, because people though it’s no use having some gadget to polish shoes when the shoe shine boy does the same work. You could also make coffee manually, so why have coffee dispensers at office? The answer is simple – to save valuable time. This is why shoe shine machines have become popular gadgets at office premises the world over. Give your business facility a perfect holiday gift this Christmas – a cool new shoe shine machine.
