Valentines Gifts: Romance matters not money by Patrick Coal

Article published on January 18th 2012 | Shopping

The last thing that you definitely do not want to do is to forget giving Valentines gifts to the love of your life, your sweetheart. If by any chance you commit this crime on 14th February i.e. on Valentine's Day, you would have to repent for it for many days to come. If you are lacking in gift ideas then maybe the following suggestions would be useful to give you a fair idea about what gifts can be given to your loved one.

First of all remember that Valentine's Day is not about showing your money power to your loved one. Instead it is about expressing your love in the most romantic ways possible. So start with flowers. Girls love flowers and gifting a bunch of red rose with a love message attached is a great idea for Valentines gifts. Boys who are on a tight budget might even buy a single red rose and give it to your girlfriends.

Traditional Valentines gifts usually include heart shaped boxes filled with heart shaped chocolates and red colored, heart shaped soft toys. Gifting any of these items would work just fine. Team these gifts with a bouquet of red roses and you will find your girlfriend in your arms the moment she sees the gifts.

Girls on the other hands can gift their boyfriends a wristwatch or various masculine fragrances. A good gifting idea that a girl can think for her boyfriend is a heart shaped photo frame containing either a beautiful picture of her or a beautiful picture of both her and her boyfriend. All of these serve as excellent Valentines gifts ideas.

A married couple can celebrate Valentine's Day in style. As for Valentines gifts a husband can buy a diamond jewelry set for his wife, take her out for a long drive or for a movie and later wrap the evening with a romantic candle light dinner. Long walks by the seashore, a romantic getaway and a relaxing session at a five star spa are excellent ideas too.

Married women on the other hand can think of giving their husband a book, CDs, masculine fragrances, gift baskets, shaving sets or a latest gadget that your husband has been yearning for so long. While the girls and women have it rather easily it is the men and the boys who are left clueless about the Valentines gifts. These gifts are not meant to display your financial strength but are meant to bring out the romantic side in you. So, now when 14th February comes it will be easier for you to choose your gifts.
