They say the first impression is the last impression and you might not get another one to change the first one. A business suit is expression of how you would be projecting yourself to the world.

Business suits never went out of fashion not at least in the corporate boardroom and client meetings. Men at the helm like to leave a statement by just wearing a suit that is they are perfectly in control.

A person should wear whatever makes him comfortable but that does not give them reason to be lousy or ill-fitted. A suit is as good as the occasion the person wears it for.

Suits the time

The same suit that a person wears to a corporate meeting might not look good to an evening party. There is no a perfect suit for every occasion.

A Party wear would require something attractive than the Office wear. The suit does change with every occasion and how a person dresses up.

An office wear could be a perfectly tailored while a party wear could look good even loose fitted.

Whatâ€™s your Type?

An office wear comes with a whole gamut of options and also depends on your body type. A single breasted two buttons would make a person look taller while a double breasted would make a person look thinner than usual. Business suits could be a readymade which could then be customized according to your needs or could be a tailor-made best suiting your body type.

Bespoke tailor-made is the best way to choose the tailor the person is comfortable with as well as that best fits the personâ€™s body structure.

A suit could be a mix and match of fabric available in the market. A suit when combined with 45% or more wool would give a sharp look. A polyester combined suit is easy to dry clean and is free of crease. A person could also go for a mix and match suit that can be combined with two or more trousers. Climate could also have a bearing on the fabric you pick. A person doesnâ€™t want to sweat even though they might be well dressed. Corduroys are a strict no-no when it comes to business suits.

Suits your Pocket

Sometimes the suit you pick or where you get it made could cost you a fortune. It would be hence advisable to do the budgeting according to your purchasing power. A readymade could be available for a lower price but could be ill-fitted as well as could cost you for alteration.

What to choose

A tailor-made suit could depend on the reputation of the tailor and a bespoke could cost even more. Going for a tailor would require that you go through the samples as well a word from a well satisfied customer could make you consider a particular tailor or a brand.

A readymade could be an option if the person happens to be the size group for which it is specifically made or could be modified accordingly.
