Article published on June 7th 2012 | Society

Dangerous driving is one of the frequent causes of road traffic accidents and damages. Reckless and uncontrolled driving leads to severe damages to human life and property that are often irrevocable. Owing to this steady rise in driving offences committed at different hours of the day there are laws that have been formulated for the protection of victims and control the perpetrators of such crimes. There are different conditions stated that will term an incident caused by dangerous driving as liable for a sentence and is a punishable offence. The state of health and the presence of alcohol is the first determinant of irresponsible driving.

For most of the driving offences that take place across the world, there is a common influence of alcohol in them. In this kind of condition, there are accidents that can cause damage or even fatality to human life. In other cases, driving under the influence of alcohol can also lead to extreme damage to public and private property. Under the provisions of legal statutes, there are different provisions of punishments and sentences dealt out for each kind of driving offences. One of the primary and severest effects of dangerous driving is causing death to another human life. This offence is punishable by a sentence for even a period of 14 years in the UK. Similar punishment clauses are also there for other countries as well.

In all cases of dangerous driving there is a fine amount, which is levied on the perpetrators of driving offences. This is often unlimited depending on the severity of a case or the extent of damage caused. In other cases, there are upper limits of amounts that are already decided. Penalty points will also be given to the driver who has engaged in any form of dangerous driving. This may also lead to the suspension of rights to drive as well depending on the number of penalty points that he has already accrued in his name.

Article Source:
http://www.articleside.com/society-articles/dangerous-driving-offences-consequences-on-and-off-the-roads.htm - Article Side

Julia Roger - About Author:
For more information on a dangerous driving, check out the info available online; these will help you learn to find the a driving offences!

Article Keywords:
dangerous driving, driving offences

You can find more free articles on Article Side. Sign up today and share your knowledge to the community! It is completely FREE!