When you have worked hard your entire life, you usually want to experience the best that life has to offer. There is no substitute for living in luxury – being surrounded by beautiful things, looking out onto beautiful views.

Providing luxury living in San Francisco in the city's Financial District, the Millennium Tower, finished in 2009, stands tall in the South of Market Street District or SoMa. The stunning late-modernist architecture of this condominium building is eye-catching. The skyscraper is 58 stories high and contains residences, spa and fitness club, restaurants and much more. The fabulous Millennium Tower is the highest condominium building west from the Mississippi River. This impressive structure is an amazing place to live the luxury lifestyle in San Francisco, California.

A Building for the Contemporary City

The construction of the Millennium Tower was a project that cost well over $350,000,000 and the construction took a mere four years from 2005 to 2009. A narrow skyscraper, the tower rises over 600 feet tall. The design style of the building shows the dream of the designers, depicting a radiant and luminous crystal.

On the northeastern side of the tall tower is a smaller tower with 11 floors. The two structures are connected by a beautiful antechamber or hallway of glass that is 2 floors tall. There are three different styles of condos that potential residents can choose from. Whether they prefer a loft style or a more traditional floor plan, there is something to suit all tastes at the Millennium Tower. Additionally, a fabulous restaurant is found on the first floor of the main building. RN74 is an upscale European dining experience with Chef Michael Mina as its director.

The Millennium Tower contains over 400 phenomenal residences with higher price tags on higher floors. Including the top prices of any condominiums or even homes on the California coastline, the condominiums are perfect for those who work in the local area or who love living in downtown San Francisco. They are also an ideal choice for people who have lived in larger homes and who wish to downsize, without losing the taste of the finer things that they have come to enjoy.

The Building and the Lifestyle

Now, people who live there enjoy the Millennium Tower Club Level admittance. The Club Level lets residents access the private dining room, the children's play room, the lounge and the spa. Exercise in the fitness center and lap pool is free to residents. Then, special events are available to those who live in the Tower as well, such as private film screenings and personal celebrity visits. People can truly live the luxury lifestyle in SoMa in this condominium setting. The spectacular Millennium Tower provides the ultimate in luxury living in San Francisco, California.
