Andreas Illiger has proved to be a gaming expert since he designed and developed the global renowned smart phone game of Tiny Wings. Originally, the game was meant for Apple iOS only, but with the rising popularity and reviews, the company is planning to launch an Android version of the game very soon. Android is a tough competitor to Apple iOS. However, forgetting about the competition, Apple played a smart move recognizing the demand of public and promising to design the Tiny Wings for PC. To make this dream turn into a reality, A California based new and upcoming company BlueStacks is poised to make a big contribution.

BlueStacks have designed and launched software with the similar name that a user can download on his or her pc and enjoy all the benefits of Android device on his computer. However, the software is still in its alpha version, more than half a million downloads have already occurred for the same. With such rise in downloading figure every day, BlueStack is also on the verge of presenting pro versions of it where one can easily play tiny wings on pc.

The Tiny Wings was topping as the best seller on Apple store for few weeks till it got replaced by another rival, Angry Birds. Nevertheless, by that time, the game has already been bought by 3.6 million people worldwide. Eventually, with the rise of later, the concerned game started to lose its importance. However with the news of BlueStack offering a feature by which the user can play and enjoy their favorite Android application on large screens of their pc, the need for Tiny Wings have found to rise a bit. It has its own set of followers who would be the happiest person on earth to play Tiny Wings on PC. As the Mac version of BlueStack is yet to be released, that section of people will have to wait for a while till the company officially launches the application. One thing is for sure that Tiny Wings will always be remembered as the stepping-stone for Angry Birds.
