Owing a personal computer is a replenishing thought. The next thought occurs on what softwares to install to optimize its performance. However, purchasing softwares can be very expensive. Moreover, finding genuine version of freeware is not easy as well. One could think of gaining access to a website that holds informative links to external websites that allow free software downloads. Moreover, it is quite tempting to find about sites that allow free access to important softwares to boost the performance of a PC. On contrary, buying expensive wares could shoot up the cost making it an expensive deal.

Softwares come with certain system requirements. To meet them, one needs to refer to what OS (Operating System) does the software is compatible with. Moreover, some free software downloads require a fixed free memory for usage. Hence, one need to check the free space on the hard disk before downloading the software. Gaming softwares ask for additional specifications such as processor speed and number of partitions or cores. It is ideal to read to the specifications of the software before downloading the ware. Downloading incompatible software may harm PC or slowdown its performance. In addition, one can choose authentic websites that allow downloading high quality software free from malwares. Moreover, genuine softwares work freely with the system without causing files to overrun.

Some software manufacturers allow free trial versions for limited period to encourage sales. However, these trial versions are for a limited period only. That is, these softwares run only for specific period from their installation. Moreover, after the trial period elapses, one requires purchasing original software. Every software is different from other in terms of the programs it uses. However, a single output could be designed using several different softwares. In fact, the soul of the software is its program, which executes when one runs any software. Depending on the length of the program, the runtime differs. The challenge for a software developer is to design free software downloads with least possible run time and with minimum number of bugs. Thus, software developers work out updates for their software programs.
