DRM stands for â€œDigital Right Managementâ€•. It limits the usage of the usage of electronic files. This is used to secure the media files which contain Videos, music and other electronic files that can be transferred or share to others. It maintains the catalog of all the users that how many times these files are share to others digitally. All these files are downloading from the sites, and there is clock spam, which will stop misuse of these contents.

These registered files canâ€™t be played on other system, which are not registered or not paid for the files. It secures all the work of the publisher from the unauthorized users, and it also ensure the publisher of their product revenue. If it can be blocked it canâ€™t be reused because of encryption of the electronic files, only the registered users can use that file. Protection of these files can be done in many ways; one of them is the regional code which will protect the Video, music, or some other media files which are transferred electronically. The regional c lock does not allow using files in the other regions. It is necessary for the publisher to protect their media file from the unpaid users or unregistered users.

It will protect all types of electronic files like films, television shows, internet music, computer games, e books, watermarks, and other electronic files that are transferred and canâ€™t be shared from one client machine to other nodes. These files are only accessible via the users, who are registered or paid for getting the digital contents These DRM files canâ€™t be shared to other users, who have not paid for these digital contents.
