Article Side
Jvalidator 1.8; Data Quality Firewall also available open-source! by Annalisa

Article published on April 19th 2012 | Software

Jvalidator 1.8 is a Data Quality Firewall software dedicated to validation and real-time processing of data streams. jValidator operates as middleware in the exchange of data between different systems and it process the data stream to achieve consistency and output quality which ultimately improve database value and reliability.

At management level within companies/organizations jValidator allows mangers to get rid of all specialists dedicated to programming alternative custom solution that require constant monitoring and code changes, such as implementing ETLs. Ultimately it [jValidator] innovates real-time data stream management & monitoring improving the quality of Databases, thus, mid/long term database economic value.

Jvalidator is especially suitable for medium/large organizations such as banks, education institutions, utility companies, government entities, or smaller ones that manage large data streams such as e-commerce companies and Web Based Service companies.

For More info www.jValidator.com

For Sales affiliation interest please contact the Software House at info@openprj.it

Article Source:
http://www.articleside.com/software-articles/jvalidator-1-8-data-quality-firewall-also-available-open-source.htm - Article Side

Annalisa - About Author:
http://www.jvalidator.com/?langen

Article Keywords:
free software, data quality firewall, data stream, open-source

You can find more free articles on Article Side. Sign up today and share your knowledge to the community! It is completely FREE!