Article published on May 1st 2012 | Software

Portfolio is the showcase of your work, your skills and your potential for your future employers. The more time and effort you dedicate for a usable and nice-looking design, the higher are your chances for getting better account balance in the end of the month. So how can you make sure your portfolio is better than the portfolios of your competitors? How can you point employerâ€™s attention to your works?

Semantic Solution Creating a successful portfolio is easier than you think. Focus on simplicity, ease of use, hitting your objectives, professionally managing the project, and youâ€™ll end up with a successful portfolio. In this article weâ€™ll review 5 pitfalls that commonly plague portfolio design. Then weâ€™ll cover Portfolio Tips that if carefully considered and well executed will deliver quality results for your portfolio.

There are some common mistakes designers make in their portfolios. Letâ€™s review these common pitfalls first to make sure you donâ€™t fall into one of these traps.

Check out some of the freshest, most interesting designer portfolios from around the web. Many of these are new for 2011 and all of them are worth a look or two. Enjoy!

A designerâ€™s portfolio website is absolutely essential in attracting new clients. Thereâ€™s no better pla to showcase your skills, past work, and technique for potential customers to peruse prior to making a commitment. Showcasing your work needs to be a professional, clean, and simple process that is wrapped in the perfect design itself. Iâ€™ve gathered 25 great web and graphic designer portfolio websites. These represent some of the best design portfolio sites on the web. Take a glance and let me know your favorites.

There seems to be a recent trend whereby creative are a esthetically stripping down their online portfolios to their bare essentials. (UK-based web designer/web developer Kean Richmond recently discussed this trend in an article about "undersign", and the possible reasons why this trend is becoming widespread.)

There seems to be a recent trend whereby creativeâ€™s are a esthetically stripping down their online portfolios to their bare essentials. (UK-based web designer/web developer Kean Richmond recently discussed this trend in an article about "undersign", and the possible reasons why this trend is becoming widespread.)

A portfolio can make or break you. It's important to show your best work, your variety and stand out. In this showcase we've put together a collection of 55 portfolios we've found online that we think stand out as clever, creative and inspiring. We hope these can inspire you when youâ€™re making your own portfolio, when creating web designs and in other projects. We find these pleasant to look at and invite the visitors to want to learn more about the people behind them.

Article Source:
http://www.articleside.com/software-articles/web-portfolio-inspiration.htm - Article Side

Semanticsolution - About Author:
You want to more information our organization then you try a Semantic Solution-Your Global Partner For Web Design and Development you are visit to us find information of portfolio a Web Portfolio Inspiration | Functionality of a Website .

Article Keywords:
web development portfolio, offshore web development company, india outsourcing services, e-commerce services

You can find more free articles on Article Side. Sign up today and share your knowledge to the community! It is completely FREE!