It is one of the most popular past times in the country with over 4 million anglers in the UK alone. These anglers don't just catch their fish however they are enthusiastic in river conservation too, making sure our rivers don't get polluted and littered.

The team from Ocean Tackle Store have provided guidance and advice on how to begin and take joy in fishing.

First of all, you will need the basics, for taking up fishing these include a rod and a reel. There is no need to spend a fortune and these shouldn't cost more than Â£20 and as you improve on your skills you can get more advanced equipment helping you catch larger fish. Then importantly every fisherman has a tackle box full with different size hooks, lures, sinkers, bobbers and swivers along with other bits and bobs.

After this you have to choose where you are going to fish, will you choose the sea or in freshwater. The fish in each of these areas are extremely different and require different fishing methods. For every style of fishing, it is essential to learn how to cast, everyone does it a bit differently, and an advised way to practice in an open space, like your back garden. Just make sure no one else is there.

Once you have mastered the art of casting and you are fully equipped you are almost ready. Tie a fishermans knot onto your hook and affix the bait, this can be live bait like earthworms and maggots, or if this turns your stomach a bit too much you can always use dry pellets. Another userful piece of attire is polarized sunglasses and these will reduce the glare from the water surface, letting you see what's lurking below.

When planning the first fishing trip it is always advisable to listen to more experienced anglers. They usually are informed on the best locations and will provide plenty of advice on sea fishing hooks. A good hint on learning to fish is to think like a fish, this way you will uncover hiding places. Local fishermen will also inform you about pollution in the area, especially if you are looking to eat your catch.

Once you have cast your fishing line to where you think the fish might be, reel in the slack. Its useful to support your rod on a 45-degree angle, Keep casting and reeling in until you feel a strain on your line, you have caught your first fish! Aim your rod towards the fish and reel in pulling up the rod tip to set the hook. To minimise injury to the fish, do this process as quick as you can and then catch the fish with a net as it swims in the shallow water and transfer it to a bucket, taking away the hook carefully.

An advantage wish fishing is getting outside and near the water although catching the fish can be fun too. Making sure you have the right equipment will make this task even easier and satisfying, and more importantly safe.
