The Best Quality Benchmade Knives

Benchmade knives are the finest blades produced in the world. Although the company was originally began in California in 1988, by 1990 the Benchmade Knife Company opened up their doors in Clackamas, Oregon. At first times were tight also, the first knives were primarily Balisong knives. They're folding knives with two handles that counter-rotating about the tang.

The business was going to make it right, and this passion spurred the corporation to grow and prosper. They acquired new state-of-the-art equipment to replace the used machines they began with. Benchmade was the very first knife manufacturer to get laser equipment on-site. They continued a tradition of innovation by using unconventional materials and modern methods to build better knives.

In 1991 Benchmade Knives released their Designer Series with several customized designs. These modern knife designs thrilled knife users and the results showed from the skyrocketing sales figures. By 1996 the company surely could transfer to a new 35,000 sq. ft. contemporary facility with modern equipment and the accessories required to make a excellent type of cutlery.

Today the knife company is renowned for good quality materials and expert craftsmanship. The organization has collaborated with a number of legendary knife makers for example recently deceased Jody Samson who was best known for designing the swords and knives used in Conan the Barbarian and several other movies. These knives are made for the loyal following of specialty knife users who demand first class quality.

For classification purposes, Benchmade knives are split up into four classes: Red Class, Blue Class, Black Class and Gold Class. The Red Class knives specified for having a casual buyer in mind. Red Class products were produced off shore (Asia, China, Taiwan, etc.), but the line was discontinued in 2010.

The Blue Class designs offer the most variety for folks seeking a high quality blade. Higher than normal quality cutting tools are very popular, plus they fit most budgets. One interesting Blue Class knife may be the 171 Chopper competition knife. The Benchmade Company sponsors competitors in Cutting Competitions throughout the country. The 171 Chopper is tough to defeat at these competitions.

The Black Class of Benchmade knives are developed for extreme duty. They are considered being tacticals which are preferred by Elite Military Troops, Law Enforcement and Public Safety officials. The 172 Tomahawk is a unique part of the Black Class. It's regarded as a breaching tool and certainly not really hatchet. It's made from one solid component of steel which is a testament to its quality of construction.

The Gold Class is referred to as the very best of all the Benchmade blades. This class includes knives which can be Limited Editions or are constructed with costly materials and finishes. There are other Benchmade knife series like the Bone Collector for your serious hunter to use in the field. They are produced for performance as all the knives are.
