Article published on December 17th 2011 | Technology

Sale of apps on the android app market is on the rise. Thanks to the wide range of devices that supports the android platform. If you too have a unique app idea that can help millions of others in some or the other way and are contemplating to build it for android powered devices, it's of most importance that you choose the right android app development company. Often offshore app development, especially from Indian companies, is highly preferable because of the huge cost benefits it comes with.

Here are some of the frequently asked questions for android app development services when outsourced from Indian companies. Hope this dispels some of the myths that surround android app development services from Indian IT companies.

How does the app development process go?

After a comparing the quotes of a number of android app development services providers, you zero down on one company. The app development process differs marginally across companies. Typically, this is how it goes. You build up on the app idea further by discussing about the kind of app you are seeking to develop. At this stage, it is important to know whether the company offers a protection for your intellectual property. Finalizing the app architecture is followed by designing the look and user interface of the app. The app is then coded to give the desired functionality. Last step is to test the app for usability and if everything is ok, the app is uploaded on the app market.

How much involvement is needed from me?

Outsourcing app development drastically reduces the time you would be otherwise required to spare for in-house app development. Client approval is mainly required at the time of finalizing the app architecture, app design and for app usability testing. That's it. If you choose an expert android app development services India Company, you can further reduce your time involved. They know the current app trends and build your app in view of that.

Can the company guarantee me quality apps?

Quality apps have always haunted app development aspirants away from the Indian sub continent. It is a myth that apps developed by Indian companies are not up to industry standards. If it was to be true, then world renowned companies would never outsource their app development projects to India. Quality of the app is determined by its functionality, ease of use and appeal to the target customers. If your app fits these criteria, you have a quality app.
