Environment and the Energy Egg by Arnold Smith

Article published on January 8th 2012 | Technology

Lately I used to play games like Xbox and some online games. Electricity consumption on these games don't matter at all. My parents are government employee and they have good income. I think everything is well in terms to electricity consumption. I spent 7-8 hours a day, sometimes I left this game open without turning it off. I don't care about how much electricity they paid, I don't event bother myself asking them. In terms of electronic device, I have Iphone4 and PSP. I'm abundant about this but sometimes I think I can't use them at once. Am I in the state of maturity?

As my parents working, they come home late. When they arrived, I've already sleeping. The in the morning we take breakfast together, some small talks and go. This is just life, way beyond what I expected. I'm just 15 years old and not so much too friendly. I still much friendly on the online environment. I have so much friend there that I can talk about the game's strategy. Although time in online is very fast compared to real environment I still love it. Until such time I watch videos about future of our mother earth. I then internalized at my young age to help. Though it is very strange instantly or I think I've done on my games and need more experience on helping the environment. Imagine our earth will not last long, maybe 3 billion years our star would vanish and a thousand years catastrophic phenomena would occur. How are we going to survive in this situation.

Now for more the meantime, global warming is a very hot issue. If you tried viewing global warming in youtube you can imagine how enormous it grows and how scary if it will happen. It will happen then maybe a decade from now. The effect would be devastating and nothing would survive not even bacteria. If you can imagine Mars, that would likely our earth would happen.

I became active in my school and they used me to promote some useful product that is helpful in reducing the effect of Global Warming. They've said that I'm nerd in computer but they don't know it's only online games. Stuff like this is not useful to develop your personality. I participated in the environment awareness program. The product they've introduced is the energy egg. I've already tested it, I still play games and left the room without turning it off. But guess what happen? This the energy egg automatically shutdown power when you go out, it can sense human. Well, this depend on settings that you made before you go out. You can set the timer from 5 - 30 minutes. When it is only a minute counting, it will beep and this is a message that your power is going to turn off. If you will not respond to this beeping. In my opinion it is very useful at my own age that is really forgetful.

I introduced this to my parents and they've said they will introduce this to their office mate also. You know what is the relation between this device, electricity and global warming? Electricity burned coal and coal is a pure carbon, this carbon can damaged the atmosphere and it will result to global warming. So they are still integrates each other. You too can help the environment by spreading this device. I'll highly recommended this specially at my age.

Article Source:
http://www.articleside.com/technology-articles/environment-and-the-energy-egg.htm - Article Side

Arnold Smith - About Author:
Questions from this article are accepted through arnoldsmith@a the energy egg.

Article Keywords:

The Energy Egg

You can find more free articles on Article Side. Sign up today and share your knowledge to the community! It is completely FREE!