Article published on May 24th 2012 | Technology

Billing Service is an essential aspect of the consumer and service provider relation. When we buy any commodity from the service provider we are given a bill and we pay the amount according to the bill. The bill is the proof that the consumer has paid for the services or products that he has bought. There are many kinds of billing services that we see today. Some of them are as follows:

In most countries, automated billing has still not come into vogue. They still use the manual method of billing. There are slips of printed bills. The details are filled in by the shop keeper or the accountant and then stamped or signed. However, this is mostly in cases of very small businesses, like the local grocery store.

s, automated billing service is now the keyword. There are automated portals which calculate the total amount that has to be by the user. The bills come out printed and stamped. Such services not only make the transaction processes easier but also faster and more accurate because anyone can go wrong in such huge transactions if done manually.

There are industries in which automated billing has to be the only form of billing mechanism. As in the telephone industry, there is no other way to keep track of the hundreds of users how they spend their each and every second. Although prepaid services have curbed this form of billing to a large extent, but still the use the landline phones and postpaid services, number is hundreds.

Automated billing is hence vastly required these days and new software is being developed everyday to see how and up to what extent this process can be made faster and easier than ever before.

Article Source:
http://www.articleside.com/technology-articles/kinds-of-billing-service-that-we-see-today.htm - Article Side

James Blee - About Author:
For more information on a Billing Service, check out the info available online at http://www.ccrebills.com/automated-billing-service.html

Article Keywords:
Billing Service,automated billing

You can find more free articles on Article Side. Sign up today and share your knowledge to the community! It is completely FREE!