Article published on January 6th 2012 | Technology

If the process of product purchase can be automated and can be done sitting at the comfort of your home then why billing cannot be automated. Automated billing has made the process of billing easy and software- operated, and this has completed the total process of purchase related to products and services. In case of automated billing the merchant do, not need to prepare the bill manually for the products purchased.

This process requires less time and saves a lot of money. You do not need to employ a lot of people for the billing process. The amount for each goods sold needs to be uploaded in the software with all the percentage or value discounts possible. At the time of making the bill for specific customers, the product specific details are computed by the system and any calculation of discount is done instantly. Previously if a customer purchased five products each having different discounts the bill preparation took at least 10 minutes and there were possibilities of human error. But with this system, the process can be really fast and accurate. You may even get the print out of the bill instantly will all the details written in it. You can even make the bill for the customers with the details of the person such as name and billing address. You can upload this information in the system and generate it every time you require preparing a bill.

Automatic billing is very useful in case of recurring charges and orders. The bill can be directly sent to the purchaser using the electronic billing system. The system can be customized to give recurring bill every month or week and deliver it to the person in concern.

Article Source:
http://www.articleside.com/technology-articles/the-use-of-automatic-billing-in-modern-shops.htm - Article Side

Julia Roger - About Author:
For more information on a automated billing, check out the info available online; these will help you learn to find the a automatic billing!

Article Keywords:
Automated Billing, Automatic Billing

You can find more free articles on Article Side. Sign up today and share your knowledge to the community! It is completely FREE!