A Canadian Summer for Children by Traceybrue

Article published on December 29th 2011 | Travel

Children in the age group of 5 â€“ 16 years can have the wonderful experience of travelling to Canada, making new friends, having a lot of fun and develop themselves as ideal individuals through various activities by joining for the Canada Summer camp. For boys and girls, it is a rare opportunity to improve upon their personal skills and learning how to perform as a group.The summer camp being conducted in Canada is quite similar to that in the US. The children can choose among day camps and residential camps and theses programs are held at around 800 different locations in Canada. Canada started this program during the period 1890 â€“ 1900 and Ontario was the first location.Still Ontario has the maximum number of camps.Such programs are held in seven of the other provinces of Canada also. After Ontario,British Columbia, Alberta and Quebec are having the maximum activities. In addition to enjoying close friendship,living in beautiful places etc the participants get very valuable working experience also during such programs.

The residential type of camps are often organized in rural locations. After vigorous activities during day time, the participants can relax during night inside tents or cabins made for them. The nature of activities and environment will be different among individual camps. However, in all of them the participants are encouraged to work hard and get acquainted with new responsibilities in their jobs. A few of the jobs offered during the programs have the option to continue even after completing the camp activities. The camp counselors and other staff members maintain friendly relationships with all the participants and they train the children how to be one among a group. The jobs at the summer camp include Camp counselor skills, sailing, fishing, mountaineering, performing arts like guitar playing and singing, sports activities like tennis and gymnastics, creative arts like pottery and jewel making etc. The day camps are also many in number and the activities include sports, computer, science programs etc.

There are various professional agencies that offer various programs of the Canada summer camp. Parents can have the details regarding their programs from their brochures and also they can be contacted at their offices either over phone or in person. In order to enroll the children the parents have to forward the filled up forms along with an initial deposit amount to the organizing agency. Many of the agencies offer the facility of online registration also. They will send the brochures, enrollment forms etc to the parents by email.
