Beaches in La Gomera by James Purefoy

Article published on June 25th 2012 | Travel

The major attraction to most tourist destinations is the beaches found within it. It is common for most tourists to love a place where they get the chance to bask in the sun and at the same time have some fun engaging in sports and other activities before then eventually relaxing the night away. The essence of any holiday is to unwind and enjoy life.

Luckily, Spain is one of the countries which have beaches in abundance. It has several islands most of which have numerous beaches hence the options are endless to the tourist coming here for a holiday or tour of the country. This country has a combination of all worlds and you can get to enjoy it all depending on the destination that you choose within it.

The Canary Islands have a reputation as far as tourism is concerned and they are some of the islands in the country with beautiful beaches waiting to be enjoyed and explored. La Gomera is one of the islands that you will find amongst the group and just like the rest there are several beaches here from where you can have all the fun that you are looking for during your holiday. It also has small bays made of fine sand just like the beaches and is mostly on the steep coast of the island.

Playa de Santiago: it is a small fishing village with a beautiful fine beach. The water here is crystalline and you will enjoy the coolness and the friendly climate within the beach. There are lots of activities that one can take part in while enjoying the sun and sand from the beach.

Valle Gran Rey beach: within the important green valley of Valle Gran Rey you will find this amazing beach considered to be among the very best of La Gomera ferienwohnungen Estartit. It is therefore one of the most popular and it will normally be crowded especially during the peak warm season summer. It is a beach that exposes tourists to fun activities and there are spots which are quieter for those who would rather enjoy the warmth and sand more calmly.

Playa de Callehermoso: this beach is near Acantilado de Los Organos and it is very fine and popular among the visitors who come here. It also has lots of activities and sports to offer to its visitors apart from the warm climate and the fine sand making it all possible.
