Book a Taxi to London City Airport by Daniel Henry

Article published on July 16th 2012 | Travel

London is a burgeoning city and as new locations become hot-spots for the discerning tourist and commuter, parts of London begin to grow. A location such as this is Liverpool Street Station in Central London. Access to this exciting cultural spot is possible via Liverpool Street station which as rail and tube connections to most of Central and Greater London. The area also has a number of bus stops along the front of the station with journeys around London. However, if you would rather hop into a black cab to take you from A to B then there are plenty of taxis from Liverpool Street Station available. This can sometimes be a quicker more direct mode of transport, providing traffic isn't too bad. The good connections to and from the area make this a desired place to visit. In the nearby vicinity is Spitalfields Market and Brick Lane which brings hundreds of visitors to the area for its bohemian and interesting cultural offerings. These exciting hot-spots are only a short walk away, but you could easily take a Liverpool Street Station minicab to and from your destinations - especially when the weather is rotten.

A short stumble out of the station and you'll be greeted with a number of restaurants, bars, pubs and shops. The station has exits to Liverpool Street, Bishopsgate and Broadgate development. The Broadgate development and some of the Bishopsgates area is predominately made up of office buildings and places of work, due to the fantastic location. Lots of people working in the area enjoy its location, north-east of the City of London and its fantastic lifestyle. The Bishopsgate exit also leads on to some trendy bars and a selection of high street stores. You'll find many people stopping for a drink after work in the many pubs and bars. They offer a relaxed informal milieu for the professional to relax in after their 9-5 hours. Those that are stopping for drinks that live in London, can be tempted to stay out a little longer than those that live a long train commute away. A black cab from Liverpool Street Station may seem like a luxury, but the safety and security they provide for a more direct journey home is priceless. What's more is London cabbies now the city like the back of their hand and can take you to whatever destination you like in Greater London and beyond.
