Located near Regents Park, there are a number of Edgware road hotels available. You will have easy access to the park if you stay around this area and can even take in a wild animal or two at London Zoo.

Officially opened in 1828 and spread across 36 hectares of land, you will be able to enjoy over 300 different types of mammals, over 500 varieties of birds and more than 300 different reptiles. From pelicans to piranhas, you will find a wealth of wildlife on your doorstep.

Edgware Road is also the perfect place to explore the nooks and crannies of fashionable Maida Vale as well as London's other big attraction Hyde Park where you might bump into someone getting on their soapbox at Speakers Corner. You can also enjoy the Serpentine Gallery and lake if you fancy a dip.

There are a number of Edgware road hotels to choose from in the area including the Hilton Metropole, the Holiday Inn and Thistle chains.

However there are a few standout Edgware road hotels London that will make you not want to leave. The nearby Mandeville Hotel located on Mandeville Place oozes charm, glamour and modern chic. This 4 star boutique hotel is famed for its stunning design, excellent service and funky interiors. You are also just a short walk away from Oxford Street, one of London's most iconic shopping districts.

Get your credit card at the ready and go wild in the aisles as you will find a lot of the high street retailers as well as higher end stores located on Bond Street.

The Mandeville features an award winning restaurant which has been given the honour of an AA Rosette. All bedrooms are beautifully furnished and enjoy luxury products by Penhaligon's.

Their afternoon teas are almost as famous as Her Majesty herself and take on a number of themes throughout the year. Delicate sandwiches and creamy scones are combined with a range of the finest teas this side of the River Thames.

One of the most famous Edgware Road hotels London that is in the vicinity is the Cumberland Hotel. Perfectly positioned on Great Cumberland Place, this venue boasts a Michelin starred restaurant and is home to one of the most well-known chefs in the UK.

Rhodes W1 is the culinary palace of celebrity Chef Gary Rhodes where you will find an array of beautifully executed dishes including truffle macaroni cheese finished with chestnut mushrooms and a succulent free-range chicken in red wine, mushrooms, button onions, lardons of bacon and finished with a generous helping of creamy mashed potatoes.
