Enjoying a Palos De La Frontera Tour by Martine Thompson

Article published on April 19th 2012 | Travel

This white and charming village has remained picturesque and has maintained a great ambience even with the growing agricultural and industrial sectors. The port found here is what has made the region famous especially taking into consideration that it is where Christopher Columbus set off on the journey to discover the world. Palos de la Freontera has quite a bunch of attractions among them churches, museums and monasteries. The Columbus route has attracted tourists from far and wide and there are numerous exhibitions held here showcasing documents and other essentials dating back to the Christopher Columbus times. The exhibits take place in monasteries some of which date back to the 14th century as well as the 15th century.

Those who love history will enjoy a tour through the old port where they can see reconstructed Columbus ships. The port has been reconstructed complete with shops, canteens and storage buildings but the replica ships are what steal the show here. Every feature of the ships has been modeled including things such as food supplies and cargo. The mariner figures on the ships are quite impressive and help people to identify with the times. Also worth checking and enjoying while here is the auditorium Foro Iberoamericano and the island of Encuentro. There is something interesting for nature lovers in the botanical garden found here that has an impressive lake and plants. There is also a sculpture museum here that is generally an outdoor feature.

To ensure that you get to enjoy everything that Palos de la Frontera has to offer you, it is important that you begin with your preparation early. There is an importance of gathering all the facts about the region so you know what to expect. A small research can help in deciding the best season to travel as well as the sites you do not want to miss while here. Depending on what you are most interested in, it becomes very easy to choose the ideal destination. Luckily, villa in spain has lots of options for tourists and you will always find a destination that is in line with the expectations that you have for your vacation or holiday. Palos de la Frontera visitors can always use the help of tour guides as a way of ensuring that they save time and at the same time exhaust everything that the interesting village has to offer.
