Factors Boosting Tourism in Puerto Rico by Roger Nash

Article published on January 19th 2012 | Travel

Tourism in Puerto Rico is huge; the vast offerings from beaches to nightlife have put this spectacular spot on the map of tourists. With the invention of the PiÃ±a Colada, there is no turning back to the meager deals of a spectacular holiday spot in this part of the world.

Beaches

One of the most effective draws of Puerto Rico is its beaches. Tourism in Puerto Rico is greatly enhanced with the offering of 300 miles of coastal sand of which many parts have been designated Blue Flag beaches. The coveted designation was awarded to the level of cleanliness, availability of amenities and facilities as well as the soft fine sand that is on the beaches. This has boosted tourism in Puerto Rico over the years.

There are many types of water sports that can be performed on these beaches which draw the crowd by the thousands every year. There is water skiing; scuba diving; snorkeling; surfing and kite-boarding besides the normal swimming and fishing activities which are available to the young and old. Water sports stores to lease or purchase the necessary attire or equipment are plentiful to ensure a pleasant and exciting day at the beach.

Accommodations

The wide ranges of accommodations that span from budget hotels to luxury resorts has boosted tourism in Puerto Rico where holiday makers of all kinds at all budgets are welcomed. There are hotels and resorts which are located near the beach and the mountain areas.

Many are also near the airport for easy arrival and departure. Some families prefer out of town accommodations like motels to have a quieter environment while making some savings.

Some individuals or the more adventurous would camp at the beaches or available camp sites for a different stay experience.

Nightlife

Although there is much to do in Puerto Rico in the day, the night must not be missed out. Night tourism in Puerto Rico is big with its vibrant nightlife found at cafes, pubs and discos. There are plenty of fancy nightclubs and laid backÂ chinchorrosÂ for the tourists to check out.

The locals will help the tourists enjoy a good night at Puerto Rico with the drinks and music. There is a lot of reveling into the wee hours of the morning with the dancing and frolicking in pop, rock, reggae or R&B music. Some clubs have live singers to give the tourists and locals a fun-filled night.

Another great booster of tourism in Puerto Rico is the prominent playing of salsa everywhere on the island. This music will sway any pure Puerto Rican away with its distinct trumpeting in the music.
