The increasing use of the internet and value-consciousness of consumers is affecting the travel industry positively. Buying and selling products online are gaining huge popularity as eCommerce is gradually becoming the backbone of every business. Also, technologically savvy people are more inclined to look for options online than anywhere else as its quick, convenient and generally, a more cost effective solution.

Well over 50% of travel related transactions are completed online, from hotel bookings to flights and now, even travel money can be added to the list. The increasing dependence on using hassle-free online booking systems means that travelers no longer need to visit the high street, their preference is to book their entire travel requirements including travel money online.

The idea of visiting an airport bureau should be avoided at all costs as travelers fall prey to poor exchange rates. Although some may not charge commission, the rate of exchange is terrible and they offer no value for money. Buying travel money online is an obvious option for anyone needing foreign exchange. Whether its travel for business or leisure, travelers are opting for an online supplier for the best exchange rates, zero commission and a secure payment facility. Online, consumers have the opportunity to compare and contrast the options before finalizing the best offer. Furthermore, there is no time constraint, the traveler can log in anytime according to his or her convenience and check out the various travel money exchange rates offered by different sites.

A great feature of ordering online is that most companies will also give you the choice of having the travel foreign currency home-delivered by means of a safe courier service. Based on the time of the day you make the order, some companies will even offer free next day delivery. Another factor that you need to watch out for is whether the currency provider will buy back any surplus currency or not. There may be situations when you end up with surplus foreign currency post your travel. Booking travel money through a provider who offers competitive buy back exchange rates is another advantage.

The Currency Club is a travel currency online specialist offering its members great savings via very competitive exchange rates on global currencies and free delivery on all orders sizes. The website offers a platform where travelers can buy foreign exchange as well as sell any leftover foreign exchange they may have once back from a trip. All communication is electronic and there are no call centers to deal with. Members are notified via email confirmations once an order has been processed and also once the order has been dispatched. Delivery is via Royal Mail Special delivery, which is next day by 1pm and fully insured and purchases of foreign exchange can be via debit cards or bank transfers.
