Article published on April 11th 2012 | Travel

India is a veritable smorgasbord of tourism options for the intrepid traveller. It is one country that has it all â€“ skiing, desert safaris, sun-kissed beaches, white-water rafting, enchanting back-waters and cool hill stations. You can pick and choose the experience you want to have in India. Tourism India spoils you for choice.

India is a mystic and ancient land. Under its Third World outer skin is a country seeped in mysticism and spirituality, just waiting to be discovered. If you wish to find a way inwards towards your spiritual self, India is the place to come to for beginning that journey. At an ashram, perhaps nestled in the Himalayas, you can join the many thousands who come in search of themselves.

Of course, for the not so spiritually inclined too, incredible India offers a lot of options.

Tours In Delhi

The city of Delhi has been the Indian capital since historic times. New Delhi still continues to be the national capital. Like the rest of India, Delhi is also a heady mixture of the ancient with the modern. As you drive through Delhi, you will be amazed to see the number of historic buildings, some preserved in their ancient setting, that dot the landscape. Delhi is an old city full of stories just waiting to be told.

New Delhi is a modern city designed by Lutyens and Baker. With well laid-out roads, and symbols of Indiaâ€™s political structure strongly visible, a drive through Delhi on tours in Delhi will give you a birds-eye view of the past merging with the present. The stately government buildings, including the Parliament House, and the historic Red Fort and Rajpath are awe-inspiring sights that speak of the Indian ethos. Other historic monuments well worth visiting are the Qutub Minar and Humayunâ€™s Tomb, both of which have been declared World Heritage Sites by UNESCO.

Tourism India

India is now considered a popular tourist destination, with vastly improved hotels and other facilities. It is affordable, and offers a variety of experiences. It is estimated that about 30 million foreign tourists visit India every year, and the number is growing. Being a vast sub-continent, with a tradition of rich history and culture, India has much to offer. India is also gaining prominence as a medical tourism centre of choice, given its relatively cost-effective and high-class medical care facilities. It would be a smart idea to undertake tourism India for the sheer with of experiences that are on offer.
