The capital city of Philippines Manila though being one of the most modern cities of the world has preserved its rich historical heritage in an excellent way. The National Art Gallery, The Planetarium, The Fort Santiago and The Quiapo Church are historical centers where travelers of flights to Manila can experience the past from close quarters. After visiting these destinations the customers of flights for Manila can experience comfortable accommodation in the luxury hotels and enjoy shopping sprees in the various shopping malls located in the city.

The National Art Gallery of the national Museum attained its present status in 2003. Earlier it was used by the Senate and House of Representatives and its ground floor was occupied by the National Library. Many official ceremonies such as the Constitutional Convention in 1934 and swearing in of the President of the Commonwealth Manuel L. Quezon were also held here. The building was first inaugurated on 16 July 1926 and was designed by Juan Arellano, then supervising architect of the Bureau of Public Works. The tourists of cheap flights to Manila can visit this building which was reconstructed in 1946 after it was partially destroyed during the bombing and shelling of Manila in 1945. The cheap flights for Manila provide many traveling options to its tourists to visit this destination.

The Planetariumâ€™s construction started in 1974 and after nine months was first inaugurated on October 8, 1975. The idea of building a modern Planetarium in Manila was first was conceived in 1970â€™s by the former National Museum Director Godofredo Alcasid, one of the founders of the Philippine Astronomical Society (PAS). The Planetarium is located between the Reading Center and Chinese Garden at the Luneta Park and can be easily visited by the tourists using Manila flights.

The Fort Santiago built during the Spanish colonial era is a defense fortress and consists of a museum called the Rizal Shrine. Many travelers availing tickets using Manila flights booking come here to pay homage to Philippinesâ€™ national hero JosÃ© Rizal as it contains his memorabilia. His final footsteps from his cell to the execution site have also been embedded here in bronze. Named after Saint James the Great, the fort is a center of trade and commerce as it consists of various storehouses, a chapel, the powder magazine, the sentry towers, the cisterns etc. The tourists of flights from Manila throng this fort in large numbers.

The Quiapo Church also known as Saint John the Baptist Parish is a famous Roman Catholic Church. Many religious devotees visit this church as it consists of a rare dark statue of Jesus Christ believed to have miraculous powers.
