Mary Fedden the Painter with a Difference by Julia Roger

Article published on April 20th 2012 | Travel

Mary Fedden is a painter of repute who is famous for landscape paintings. Her paintings were unique and thought provoking. These paintings influenced people very much and changed the way they look at things. She was based in Bristol where she did many paintings and taught painting at a school. Post World War II she developed her own style of representing flower style and still life.

She later joined The Royal College of Painting and worked as a teacher from 1958 to 1964. She has the honor of being the first women teacher to teach painting. She chose bold and expressive style to display her ideas through painting. The selection of colors for the painting was vivid and had a contrasting color.

Mary Fedden London has the credit of hosting many one-man exhibitions in London. The Royal West of England Academy also hosted a major exhibition of all the works of Mary Fedden in 1996. She has the honor of being written a monograph about her by writer and critic Mel Gooding. Though she has done some wonderful job, she has not been given the recognition that she truly deserves. She has a long career spanning many decades and has given many excellent painting works.

Many people are impressed by her paintings and are passionate about her work. She had the vision to see things in a different way and bring down her thoughts on to canvas. They were brought down in vibrant color combinations with a touch of reality. This made the works of Mary Fedden more popular and more acceptable. Though she did not get the recognition she deserved, she is still a great painter and honored by those who know about her work. The paintings of Mary Fedden London are in great demand even today.
