Small Continent of Gran Canaria by James Purefoy

Article published on June 25th 2012 | Travel

Gran Canaria is one of the many islands making up the Canary Islands. It is commonly referred to as the small continent because of the different landscapes found here and which are very varying one from another. You will find American, African and European vegetation on the island thus it looks more of a small continent which has something small from every corner of the world.

In the middle of the Gran Canaria, there is a majestic mountain range dominating and it has a very high peak. The mountain range has bizarre looking canyons cutting it but making a very interesting view. This is a feature in the island that cannot be missed by the eyes as it is very unique and interesting. Those who love hiking adventure and other fun adventurous activities will find the range very accommodating.

It is only in this island that you will find the most peculiar and differing landscapes. Even the climate is different from one area to another even though these areas are close to each other. From the desert land to the massive mountains and the tropical forests, you will find everything in the Gran Canaria to your amazement. These differences only mean that there are lots to be explored and discovered within the Island.

Apart from the breathtaking and amazing landscapes, you will find splendid beaches along the seaside. They are definitely the spots that most tourists coming here love and you will find them a bit crowded especially during the peak months. The sandy beaches offer tourists a great time to enjoy some sun especially those coming from areas that are cold even when this area is pretty warm ferienhaus mallorca. There is no other place in all of Spain that you will enjoy some sun but at the same time enjoy snow covered mountain peaks than in the Gran Canaria Island.

The Gran Canaria is an ideal spot for those looking for some fun and adventure and at the same time looking for some relaxation. The natural features on this island among them the mountains and the beaches offer tourist the best holiday experience ever. It is always amazing to move from one place to another within the island and taking the time to enjoy the difference that comes with every step that you take. It is one of the best islands that you could choose to spend a holiday in.
