Also, be sure that the organization that you're renting offers any extras you will need or want, such as a ski rack, car seat or Global positioning system.

Booking Your Car

How long are you renting? If it's for under per week, you'll likely do best with a major rental company, For rentals of a week or longer, you might get better rates from local companies, particularly auto dealers. Remember, however, to be wary of local companies if you plan they are driving a lot; if you break down or enter into any sort of accident, they often don't have the support services of the majors.

Always look around. Check the major search engines sites to get an idea of what rates are available, however, you should also visit the car rental companies' Internet sites as well -- they'll often offer exclusive discounts, and you'll avoid booking fees. Be sure to check out our selection of discount rental car deals prior to making any reservations.

To lower your rate, inquire about discounts for any major national organizations, frequent flier programs and charge card programs to which you might belong. They'll frequently offer deals on car hire Enfield. Those offered through AAA can be very good. If you're employed by a company that frequently rents cars, they may possess a negotiated rate. Be sure to check.

Before you book online, do an online search for coupon or promotion codes to put into the booking engine of the rental car company's site. Just type the specific company followed by "coupon code" in to the search field and you'll usually see special promotion codes that may save you anywhere from Five to twenty percent off the price of your rental.
