The Old Land of Fuerteventura by Nancy Gallen

Article published on July 2nd 2012 | Travel

Fuerteventura is one of the many islands that make up the Canary Islands and just like the rest of the islands in this group and in Spain in general, there is something great in store for those who take the time to explore and enjoy what it has within its fold. This island is not mentioned much but all in all it is a great place to spend a holiday within the Canary Islands of Spain.

To begin with, Fuerteventura is the only island within the group that has the oldest history to it. You will find it interesting to learn one or more things about its history. Here you will also find some of the archipelagoâ€™s longest beaches and which means also that you will be exposed to numerous beach activities and wonderful sites. The beaches are made of fine sand thereby making them suitable for all those who love the fun that comes with sun and sand.

What most people do not know about this island is that it is very near and actually next to the continent of Africa. You will be amused to know that only the very narrow channel forms the border thereby separating the island from the continent. It is easy to be stepping on the island in one minute and in Africa the next! Fuerteventura is an amazing place to spend a holiday and those who love fishing will find this to be the ideal place to be in Canary Islands. Puerto Rosario is the capital of the island and even here you will find beautiful beaches next to it.

This island also has caves, overhangs, rock formations and tunnels thereby making it very ideal for diving fans. Windsurfing also takes center stage here and there is actually a circuit here that is used for world cup windsurfing. It is always fun for fresh visitors to try out the many things that the area exposes them to as a way of fully enjoying their holidays and vacation on the island. The favorite features for many are found on the ocean beds hence you will have to be interested in discovering everything to enjoy the best of Fuerteventura villa in san jose.

Just like most of other islands in Canary Island, any time spent in this island is always worth and full of fun that you will be surprised at just how much there is to see and do while here. A well planned holiday here will always be rewarding.
