Salamanca Province is located towards the south west side of the Leon and Castile and it has its border with Portugal and Extremadura. This province is stretched on an area of twelve thousand three hundred and thirty six square kilometer. The province of Salamanca lies on the Northern highland of Spain and it includes some part of the Duero River System. Along with the Duero River System, there is a lot of growth of bushes and trees because of the poor cultivation over the years.

The climate of the Salamanca Province is dominated with winter as this season is comparatively long on this part of the Spain. The average minimum temperature during the winters in this province remains almost six degree Celsius and it never increases more than twenty two degree Celsius.

Salamanca province has a population of almost one hundred and eighty thousand inhabitants but this city still gives an impression of a big village. The language used by the inhabitants in Salamanca is pure Castilian Spanish and this is the reason that this city is famous in the whole world among those individuals who are interested in learning Spanish. It is very easy to make contacts in Salamanca as you will find majority of the inhabitants in Plaza Mayor which is also known as the Living Room of Salamantinos. Plaza Mayor is also popular as it is among the finest and best squares of Spain. This city is famous as a university city and you will find number of Spanish students in this city. There are places of interest in this city and you can get to these places easily through walk.

Calle Zamora and Plaza Anaya are among the worth visiting places of the city. You can also visit many other places in this city and there are many other places which are located just out of this city. There are many villages where you can go for a day trip and enjoy the scenery of lakes and mountains around the area.

Once you are done with the exploration of Salamanca, then you should make a stop in Barcelona to have some experience of the modern Spain. You will surely love the contrast of traditionally landlocked Salamanca and the vibrant and modernize city of Barcelona in CataluÃ±a. You can easily arrange a short stop in Barcelona as there are number of hotels in the centre of the city and also along the airport.
