Towards Mount Everest for Trekking in Nepal by Msinghraity

Article published on August 25th 2012 | Travel

The journey to Everest Base camp is indeed a package of adventures. One can have the great experience of viewing Mount Everest which is one of the highest mountain peaks of the world. The trekking through various parts of the Himalayas is indeed very exciting and here one will have a memorable experience of his lifetime. By participating in this mountain hiking, the body and mind of the people get refreshed and the trekkers feel as if they have acquired more energy to their body. Mount Everest is situated at an altitude of 8848m and is at Khumbu. In fact, it is the highest mountain peak of the world. The visitors get the opportunity to view not only Everest, but also many other giant mountains during the hiking. However, the view of the Everest is the most amazing part of the entire expedition. This trek may take not less than 12 days and the tourists will be travelling by foot, bus and domestic flight. During the tour, the trekkers can visit Kathmandu, capital of Nepal and many other places of tourist attraction in Nepal. The ghat road starts from Lukla.a

September 15 to November 15 and March 1 to May 15 are the most ideal periods of the year to undertake the trek to Everest base camp. The trekkers can have accommodation at hotels and lodges during their journey. The organizers arrange the accommodation for the trekers in advance. They ensure to accommodate all members of a group in the same hotel. Separate rooms will be provided to the visitors in the hotels and lodges. Limited facilities for accommodation are available at tea shops. The trekkers are entitled for meals and breakfast during the program.

Those who intend to undertake the hiking can contact the trekking agencies in order to make arrangements. The organizers are very cordial and they take care of all the trekkers in the same way. They provide all facilities to them so as to make them feel the trekking an exciting holiday trip. From the lists of numerous activities the participants can choose the activities they like and also they can select the places of interest that they want to visit during the trip. The local trek staffs who accompany the trekkers throughout the program provide all services to them and give necessary guidance. Each group of trekkers consists of three members and the group will have an assistant guide with them. The guides will have a leader who will be the senior person among them.
