The capital city of Germany accounts for a population of over three million and more. Apart from being the seat of political power, the city also carries a strong historical significance. After all, Berlin was the center of a great war that shook the world. The Berlin wall that once divided the country into two halves now stands testimony to the great events. Modern Berlin, however, is a place where history and modernity come together for an interesting mix. This is the prime reason why people from different parts of the world visit the city in thousands every year. Hence, one thing is certain- you are sure to enjoy your stay at the German capital.

It is advisable to start your plans for the Berlin weekend right away without wasting further time. The first think you need to look for is accommodation. There is hardly any dearth of hotels in Berlin. Moreover, they are available in a variety of economy choices. Now if you are on a budget then it is best to arrange your accommodation in a hostel or apartment facility. These days such places come with a range of modern amenities. Therefore, you will be not be missing anything by choosing to put up in an apartment or hostel.

Once the accommodation hassles get over, make plans to explore Berlin. If you are a first timer in this historic city, then consider hiring cabs. Berlin weekend breaks will give you an opportunity to discover a wide variety of amazements that the city hides in its kitty. Start the Berlin weekend with a quick trip to the Zoo. The botanical garden is another major draw.

Weekend breaks in Berlin represent everything it takes to make your foreign trip interesting and action packed. Of course, when you are here with a group of friends, you will want to do more than just visit the gardens and landmarks. In addition, to keep your quota of excitement full, the city offers a range of bars and restaurants. You can also consider spending the Berlin weekend trying your hands at different adventure games like Karting or paintballing.
