Article published on January 10th 2012 | Travel Tips

A de facto relationship is one where the parties are in a spouse-like relationship and have a mutual commitment to a shared life together. It is applicable to those in a de facto unmarried relationship with an Australian resident, suitable New Zealand citizen and an Australian citizen. When you want to apply for a spouse visa as a de facto spouse, you and your partner must have been in a de facto relationship for 12 months immediately prior to lodging your application.

There are requirements for spouse to apply for de facto visa Australia and these are: the relationship with the sponsor must be exclusive and genuine and they must be in a true, continuous de facto relationship. The two spouse must be able to prove they have lived together/are living together, even if they may have to live separately on a temporally basis while the application for a De Facto Australia Visa is considered. The applicant must be able to prove that the relationship has been ongoing for 12 months and not a short-term arrangement.

Due to increase in deceitful relationships and marriages for the spouse to get the visas to places that they want the authorities have laid down regulations and guidelines in place to ensure that the De facto Australia Visa are allocated to only those in a de facto relationship. Those with the necessary documentation and evidence to support have no problem and their application is processed faster. If you find no problem throughout the first two-year of the De facto Australia visa then you can apply for permanent residency in Australia.

The culture and altitude to life in Australia is famously unique and a popular destination for experts. There are personal attributes that helps you be a successful migrant. Flexibility is very important even if you currently live in an English country donâ€™t expect Australia to be the same so you must be able to adjust when moving to Australia. Be comfortable with your company, partner or people that you have moved with. You have to start your day to day social life from a scratch even if you have someone that you know at your destination.

A returning or a new resident moving to Australia, via sea or air freight is not accompanied by household items personal effects. To import items under the traffic code for personal effects, you must be arriving from a place outside Australia, and items must be your personal property that you owned while overseas.

Article Source:
http://www.articleside.com/travel-tips-articles/de-facto-visa-australia-and-moving-to-australia.htm - Article Side

Francis - About Author:
Francis is a professional SEM/SEO,link builder and article writer who writes on different niches.a http://globalvisas.net.au/countries/

Article Keywords:
de facto visa australia, moving to australia,

You can find more free articles on Article Side. Sign up today and share your knowledge to the community! It is completely FREE!