Heathrow Airport Restaurants and Eating by Lek Boonlert

Article published on November 28th 2011 | Travel Tips

As can be expected of the biggest international flights hub in the world, Heathrow Airport has plenty of luxurious, quality restaurants both inside the airport and in venues such as hotels in Heathrow Airportâ€™s vicinity.

For the discerning diner there are more than enough options to choose from. The Tuscany Restaurante, which is located in the Marriott Hotel next to Heathrow Airport, specialises in truly authentic Italian cuisine which is served in an urban setting that is quiet and relaxing. This restaurant is so good that it is open for dinner only and is a great place to relax just after you get off the plane or before a long journey.

Brasserie Roux is just minutes from Terminal 5 at Heathrow and is a wonderfully relaxing lounge in which to enjoy a good bite of food and to meet your friends that have just arrived, or to see off friends that are about to depart. Henleyâ€™s Restaurant and Bar is another venue which is quite exceptional; it has a definite West End feel for a restaurant that is in fact located in the Radisson Edwardian Hotel.

Inside Terminal 5 passengers who just passed security will find a rarity: Gordon Ramsay in an airport. Plane Food is an innovative food concept that offers passengers a range of pasta and risotto dishes, aged steaks plus special Plane Food picnic hampers.

Terminal 1 is lucky to have a wonderful bar called The Tin Goose, all set around retro air travel and named after the first all-metal plane created in 1927. Quick snacks, hearty breakfasts and more substantial food are on the menu in this cute bar that also serves a wide selection of beers and wines.
