Playing Mahjong with Locals in China by Allen Tannor

Article published on January 27th 2012 | Travel Tips

People who travel often are used to all kinds of Card games. They start with a game even on a train journey or in a waiting queue. Chess has always been a hot favorite with China visa travelers since olden days.

Public pursuits are a better option for travelers. An involvement in a local pastime gives a closer look into the culture of the country and provides a better understanding. China visa tourists can try up to nine games in the local set up of China.

Its design is such that it helps to exercise your feet, head and shoulders. China visa travelers can visit the patios of Luang Prabang monastery where they can see monks performing unusual feats with smaller balls. They play games like kÃ¡tÃ¢w that has many variations. It is similar to volleyball and played in many international competitions. However, the typical game experience comes from barefoot, shaven-headed and orange-robed monks leaping athletically to maintain the ball in the air for hours in a given game. China visa travelers must try it only if they are prepared to be humiliated. This game is also popular across India and Southeast Asia under different names.

Visit any beauty shop in China and you will see a crowd of people all clustered together, sipping tea and may be smoking as well, along with hitting the ivory tiles. Do you like it? , China visa travelers must not expect a very simplified game of dominoes. Let us explain properly: there are three suits each of nine tiles, with four wind along with three dragon admiration pieces, four cyclic or flower tiles, and three dices. Choose your position according to the existing twist, simply pick and reject cards in order to gather a set. Mahjong is very intricate, addictive and extremely cutthroat. China visa tourists have to be careful.

Mahjong is a favorite game of local people. After returning from work, the whole city echoes with the sound of Mahjong tiles. If a person is not available then people make fun by saying that the person is busy playing Mahjong or is on the way to play the game. This game is a traditional game, which is simple and interesting, but mastery comes from regular practice and could need a lifetime. The addiction of this game is so bad that some locals play it the whole night and sometimes carry on to the next day as well.

Varieties of Mahjong versions are available for the China visa traveler. Many a timeâ€™s, people do not know about the versions and might assert that those variations are not correct. The scoring pattern is different in the different versions of mahjong. The prime variety of Mahjong is:

The traditional Chinese mahjong, which claims to be the oldest variation of this exotic game-mahjong was introduced in America under different names in 1920. Majorly, it is popular in western countries but few people have started playing in Asia as well.

Article Source:
http://www.articleside.com/travel-tips-articles/playing-mahjong-with-locals-in-china.htm - Article Side

Allen Tannor - About Author:
Rapid Visas is located in London, and highly experienced in obtaining a China visa, be it for short term or long term visits to China.

Article Keywords:
China Visa, China Visas, Chinese Visa, Chinese Visas, Chinese Visa Consultants, Visa Consultant, Hong Kong tourist visa. London, Uk, Hong Kong visa

You can find more free articles on Article Side. Sign up today and share your knowledge to the community! It is completely FREE!