I had visited a lot of destinations in India and outside, but didn't get a chance to see Singapore despite of the fact that I wished hardly to be in this amazingly beautiful city/state somehow and anyhow. But last month, I got a chance. Actually, my younger brother was planning to do MBA from Singapore, and he was going there to visit the campuses selected. He wanted me to be with him, and this is like "Getting what exactly you want".

When people talk about Singapore, what does the topic of conversation center around? Of course, it's ultra-modernity, spic-and-span streets & highways and gleaming shopping centers. You might also hear about its salubrious weather, which never fails to impress its visitors.

But if you ask me why I like Singapore so much (now more than anytime), it's the level of perfection to which these components have been upheld by this small city. This is something you can never imagine until you visit here. It's amazing! And if you're from India where law & order is quite dreaded, this is what makes you feel envious. Everything is like meticulously planned. Towering skyscrapers share smiles with small road-side buildings, and high-end hotels lovesome small dining stalls. Alluring greenery is almost everywhere, cast a magical spell coupled with lovely climatic conditions. When you're in Singapore, you must have to follow the rules made to maintain its beauty & grace. Even chewing-gum can cause you a legal penalty.

Upon arrival, you're likely to be overwhelmed by the tropical tourist attractions which Singapore is famous for. Visit Sentosa Island, Jurong Bird Park and Chinese & Japanese Parks to give your eyes and senses an aesthetic treat. You can take pictures with lovingly Dolphins and other marine species inside the Underwater World. Take a cable car ride to Sentosa, and you get enchanting views of surrounding beaches and highlands. And don't forget to ride on world's largest observation wheel – the Singapore Flyer.

Fun never ends in Singapore even after the day becomes dark. Move ahead to Marina Bay or the Riverside Area, and lose yourself in throbbing nightlife of Singapore. You'd probably get all nightlife options full of young travelers and locals alike.

Singapore is dream place to live with traffic being smooth almost anytime. Spacious roads are well built. Road transportation is pretty maintained, and metro is quite efficient. Alongside, a number of restaurants, hotels and shopping spots add more comforts to your stay in Singapore.

In short, what I want say is that Singapore is a traveler's paradise, and a not-to-miss place you love traveling and vacations. Take a Singapore holiday package from a reliable travel agency and you can ensure a hassle-free holiday experience.

So guys, have I convinced you enough to visit this wonderland?
