We live in modern times and we want to have a space of our own, special, apart from everything else. Our homes tend to be divided in spaces that meet our more sophisticated needs, living room, bedroom, library, kitchen, dining room, home office, garden space. The garden studio is an architectural concept that can offer an alternative to an escapade inside your home.

This versatile space is a lifestyle that expresses your uniqueness. By choosing one of these garden buildings you will not only impress, but find peace and comfort or rest time in an environmental friendly and aesthetically beautiful studio. These contemporary shelters can be state of the art technology, combined with functionality and fluidity to render optimal comfort. Simplicity in lines, good insulation, and minimal intrusion on nature are characteristics you can have in a studio in your own garden.

There are several offers that can be considered when making such a step. You need to decide what type of garden house you desire. It can be a home office with natural light and quietness needed for a good concentration; rest place where you can relax and enjoy your garden; a place for your guests, in this way you have privacy from the rest of the house and focus your attention on the guests. The studio has a multitude of possibilities, it not only uses space efficiently in your garden, but it gives you a feeling of open space and perfectly balanced between interior and exterior space.

One must not forget that the technology used for such building has become more and more advanced. The timber structures against crystal glass and soft simple lines are not just a pleasure to the eye, but very efficient in terms of resistance and long lasting. The decking is made from specially treated wood for a durable life up to 60 years the binding materials are light and high-performance. Solar heat is also used to ensure comfort. The inside finishing has all that you needs in addition to a stylish modern look.
