Spring Break is likely to take place as planned, according to the results of a recent Millionaire Corner survey indicating most Indians are planning to take a holiday this year despite economic concerns and coming vacations. About eighty five Percent of survey participants, representing a range of wealth levels, say they plan to take a trip in 2012, and 90 percent say they were able to take a vacation last year, according to a February survey. Recently, Seventy percent says their travel plans are importantly unaffected by major financial concerns, while about twenty seven of participants say they have to scale their vacations plans in this year according to the survey.

Financial concerns appear to continue to restrain their travel plans. While most participants plan to fly to their destinations this year, younger and less prosperous people are more likely than their millionaire counterparts to be taking a road trip. The enormous majority of households appear unwilling to leave the family vacation â€“ A wonderful dream for celebrating vacations on lovely destination with loving ones.
